Does Truth Matter?

What is truth, and can we really know if there is an absolute truth? Although this is not a new question, over the past few years there has been a debate as to whether there is anything that is absolute. Absolute truths are those things, beliefs, or statements which cannot be changed. For instance, there are no square circles, time always moves forward, or all people die. Relative truths are those things which are subjective, conditional, and can change over time. The problem occurs when the lines between absolute and relative truths become blurred, or the rules of relative truth are applied to the absolutes. We see this happen especially when concerning moral topics such as the belief in God, the abortion debate, and issues concerning gender. However, these problems are easily solved by the person of faith. Believers take it on faith that there is one God and one Christ with unchanging natures (Mal. 3:6; Heb. 13:8). They believe in the true and infallible word of God (John 17:17). Within the pages of the Scriptures, Christians find the absolute moral standard of living, and the undeniable and undebatable code of conduct that will be used to judge all people (John 12:48). These are the absolute truths that can set people free from sin and spiritual death, (John 8:32) leading to an eternal existence, literally immortality in the presence of God and Jesus Christ (Rom. 6:23; 1 Cor. 15:54; 1 John 2:17).

“We are in Him who is true, in His Son Jesus Christ. This is the true God and eternal life.” (1 John 5:20b)
